

In this VUCA world, leaders must navigate the complexities of globalization, technological advancement, social interconnectivity, massively accelerating change and a multi-generational workforce.

An Egon Zendor report in May 2017 found that for those in VP roles and above it takes most people 6 months or longer to make an impact in their roles, and for CEO's it can be much longer. And according to the Harvard Business Review, at least 2 out of 5 new CEOs fail in their first 18 months on the job. While Executives who get the right support get up to speed in about half the time and continue to perform.

In order for leaders to inspire, influence and engage their teams so they can perform and deliver in a world of change, they must develop their practice of leadership.

Leaders at all levels have been faced with a challenging couple of years and they're breathing a sigh of relief that the end is in sight. What all leaders need to realise though is that 2020 marked the beginning of a long-term change, transition, and transformation to a new world order of work. There is a marathon of change in front of you and you need to be equipped and prepared so that you can support yourself, your team and your organisation in a sustainable way.

I worked with Stacey over a six-month period to explore alternative pathways to problem-solving and people management within my business.

Stacey was an expert guide to help me consider a variety of solutions which were not automatically top of mind. I found the process extremely enlightening,

Stacey has a deep appreciation of business management which resulted in our conversations often extending beyond the scope of what I expected.

I am deeply appreciative of her empathetic and collaborative style and would not hesitate to undertake further coaching with her in the future.

Many senior leaders will be facing a whole range of new and amplified leadership challenges. Including:

- Leading a change that lasts years.
- People who are feeling less connected now than they were in 2019; Less connected to their team and less connected to you, their leader.
- People who have become disconnected from their purpose, which impacts their engagement, discretionary effort and their performance & productivity.
- Keeping their organisation relevant in a world that has markedly changed.
- Leading a hybrid working environment.
- Exhaustion is setting in for many leaders and their people.
- Unintentionally falling back into freeze and fright responses in the face of ever-increasing challenges.

While 2020 & 2021 have seen plenty of change happen, as organisations and leaders have quickly responded to the conditions, there is more yet to do. In order to create businesses and operations that are going to survive in the long-term, systemic change is required.

Leaders of emergent change do three things really well:

1. They focus specifically on the important and impactful and stay out of the detail.
2. They communicate continuously.
3. They build capability, their own and their peoples.

Allow yourself the space to become an influencer and role model, so that you can make the difference as a visible leader and guide your organisation to sustainability.

Get set up for success. Focus on yourself, elevate your leadership and have more impact. You will walk away from this program with clear strategies to lead sustainably over the long term.

ARE YOU?

- ✓ Too focused on the immediate rather than the strategic?
- ✓ Finding it challenging to sustain yourself and find flow on a regular basis?
- ✓ Wondering about how to be visible and connected with your team, while building capability and accountability?
- ✓ Wishing you had more ideas and strategies to lead the systemic change required to ensure the ongoing relevance and success of your team and business?
- ✓ Wondering how to increase your influence with your Peers and Key Stakeholders?
